2024-APHIS-04035-F	Gass, Jonathon	Tufts University School of Medicine	I am writing to submit a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request for access to a complete and identifier-inclusive dataset of confirmed highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) detections in commercial and backyard flocks from December 2021-April 2024 in the United States. The "HPAI 2022/2023 Confirmed Detections" data table found on the APHIS website at the following address: https://www.aphis.usda.gov/livestock-poultry-disease/avian/avian-influenza/hpai-detections/commercial-backyard-flocks includes extremely useful data for understanding the scope of this enzootic event, which is still unfolding. When the data table on this website is downloaded in the crosstab format, the farms at which the outbreaks took place are listed in the "Special ID" column which includes the county name and a de-identified number (i.e. county name-03) which we believe the number corresponds to specific farms. To implement research which focuses on factors associated with outbreaks across the US, we are requesting access to the full dataset, including the names of farms where outbreaks have occurred, so that we have full access to the data required for our research. We will not publish identifiers of farms in our disseminated research findings and all datasets that include identifiers will be stored on password protected highly secure servers for use by Gass Lab faculty and staff only. The goal is not to identify specific farms where outbreaks have occurred, but to elucidate factors associated with these outbreaks, which may inform the public about risk factors associated with animal husbandry practices and HPAI outbreaks. We request the full unredacted and de-identified dataset to provide aggregated epidemiological findings and important information to the public about risk factors and mitigation measures that may benefit society. We appreciate your consideration of this request. (Date Range for Record Search: From 12/01/2021 To 04/15/2024)	04/16/2024

2024-APHIS-04150-F	McFarland, Sherman	Johns Hopkins University School of Public Health	In 2014, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) audited the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) to determine if APHIS provided adequate oversight of research facilities and effectively enforced the Animal Welfare Act (AWA). The audit report (Report Number 33601-0001-41) released on December 9, 2014 found that some of the Institutional Animal Care and Use Committees (IACUCs)—the oversight committees at research facilities responsible for ensuring compliance with AWA—did not adequately approve, monitor, or report on experimental procedures on animals. In addition, the veterinary medical officers (VMOs) that APHIS employs to conduct annual inspections of research facilities registered and licensed with APHIS were found to have neither adequately reviewed research facilities' protocols, nor verified the annual reports of research facilities. With regard to the failures of VMOs and IACUCs to perform their required duties, the OIG issued a series of recommendations. For VMOs, the OIG recommended the following: 1. Revise the AC Inspection Guide to reduce the sampling period for inactive protocols from 3 years to 1 year to align with agency inspection requirements; 2. Emphasize to all veterinary medical officers and supervisors their responsibility to follow the AC Inspection Guide in selecting and reviewing protocols, and to review annual reports for accuracy; 3. Require VMOs to document and maintain a record of the protocols they reviewed and the rationale for selecting them; and 4. Add instructions to the "Annual Report Checklist" that if research facilities choose to report animals in field studies, they should be identified as non-regulated animals. For IACUCs, the OIG recommended the following: 5. Provide training or best practice guidelines for protocol review and approval to research facilities; 6. Incorporate the activities from the "Other [Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee] IACUC Functions, Animal Use Activity Monitoring" section of the AC Inspection Guide in the "Continuing Reviews of Activities" section of the regulations and in the "Annual Review" section of the AC Inspection Guide; 7. Develop guidance and training for the research facilities that includes the activities in the "Other IACUC Functions, Animal Use Activity Monitoring" section of the AC Inspection Guide. Require IACUCs (especially those with numerous violations) to increase their number of continuing reviews of activities and document their reviews by providing a description of their activities; and 8. Provide research facilities with guidance on how to prepare annual reports accurately and require the facilities to submit site-specific annual report data. We request the disclosure of all information in the USDA's and APHIS' possession that describes the work that APHIS has performed since December 9, 2014 to address each of the eight (8) enumerated recommendations above.
